Friends | Netflix Friends is one of the most beloved television series of all time. Nearly 15 years after the last episode aired, people all over the world are still debating the theme song I'll Be There For You. The stars of the show went on to pursue fairly prosperous careers, thanks to their roles on the show. Courtney Cox played the uptight Monica, and David Schwimmer played her dorky yet lovable brother, Ross. Jennifer Aniston played the attractive and feisty, Rachel. Lisa Kudrow stars as the quirky Phoebe, Matt LeBlanc plays soap opera star, Joey, while Matthew Perry stars as the awkward Chandler. Friends aired their first episode in September of 1994, and continued to run for a decade, until ending the show in 2004. Where can you watch 'Friends' online? You can still watch friends as reruns on television. It is available through Netflix, as well as a variety of websites online. The best places to watch online include Vudu, Google Play, and iTunes. You know where to watch online, but what were the very best episodes of Friends? Of 236 hilarious and sometimes emotional episodes, which stand out as the truly best? Here's what we think. Season 1, episode 7: "the one with the blackout" A citywide blackout strands most of the cast at the girl's apartment, while it traps Chandler in an ATM vestibule with Jill Goodacre. With Monica, Phoebe, Rachel, Joey, and Ross stranded in the apartment together, hilarity ensues. Season 2, episode 12/13: "the one after the Super Bowl" View this post on Instagram A post shared by Friends (@friends) Phoebe becomes a musical sensation with children with honest songs about death in this two-part episode (which aired as a single, one-hour installment). Ross goes on a day date with Marcel, while Chandler gets played by a fourth grade classmate who is still hell-bent on revenge after a childhood humiliation decades ago. Season 2, episode 14: "the one with the prom video" This is the episode where the world is introduced to fat Monica, via a prom video of her and Rachel. Even funnier than fat Monica? The very 80's hair and hilarious one-liners. Season 3, episode 20: "the one with the dollhouse" Monica inherits a beautiful dollhouse from a dead aunt, but doesn't want to share. This causes Phoebe to build her own dream dollhouse. Another storyline in this episode revolves around Chandler's horrifying date with Rachel's boss - and his hilarious attempts to dump her. Season 4, episode 12: "the one with the embryos" View this post on Instagram A post shared by Friends (@friends) Phoebe gets artificially inseminated at the fertility clinic in this episode. Fans will remember that she agreed to have her younger (once estranged) brother's babies after he and his new wife struggled to conceive. While she is doing that, Joey and Chandler face off against Rachel and Monica in a Ross-created trivia game. The goal? To see which gender knows more about the other. The stakes? The girl's amazing New York City apartment. Season 5, episode 8: "the one with all the Thanksgivings" Friends Thanksgiving | Friends via Facebook This montage-type episode takes a walk through the worst Thanksgivings the cast of Friends has ever seen. The funniest part of the entire show? When the world sees Chandler's Flock of Seagulls hairstyle. Season 5, episode 19: "the one where everybody finds out" This was ranked as the number one best Friends episode of all time by fans on Ranker, and with good reason. Phoebe finally finds out about Monica and Chandler's poorly kept secret - their closet romance. When she finds out, her and Monica begin messing with the couple. It doesn't take Monica and Chandler long to figure out they're being messed with, and they retaliate. Hilarity obviously ensues as the two groups go back-and-forth with their outrageous pranks. It isn't always possible to get a group of friends together in the same place, and if you like sharing your movie time with friends, that makes it lonely to watch alone. But you can host a watch party and watch movies with friends online. These services make it easy. Watch Parties and group watching features don't give non-service subscribers access to subscription content. Therefore, everyone who joins one of these watch parties will need to have their own subscription to whatever service you are using in order to participate. TeleParty (formerly Netflix Party) is the feature that started it all. Using Netflix in a browser, or on Chrome, Roku, or Apple TV, you can connect with up to 50 of your friends from anywhere Netflix is available. And now with TeleParty, you can do the same with most other currently available popular streaming services like HBO Max and Disney Plus. However, you and everyone who joins your party will have to install a Chrome or Edge extension to use TeleParty. Once it's installed, choose a movie, select TeleParty, tweak some features, and start sharing an invitation. Then, start watching your faves with your friends, and chat about it right from the screen you're using. To use Netflix Watch Party, find the content you want to share, click Watch Party, invite your friends and then you're good for chatting and watching together. Did you know that Disney+ has its own built-in stream sharing feature? GroupWatch is available for every single movie and show in the Disney+ library. Just select the GroupWatch icon on the details page of whatever you want to watch, then from the GroupWatch room select (+) Invite to get a shareable link. After that, copy and share the link with friends and family. You can only have a maximum of seven people sharing a given stream, and international sharing isn't allowed. Additionally, unlike most other watch parties, there's no option for text chat—participants are only able to select emoji reactions while watching. The GroupWatch feature is available for almost every single platform that currently supports Disney+ (from smart TVs to mobile devices). However it currently will not work on PlayStation 4 or on select Roku devices. Taking a clue from Netflix, Amazon Prime released its own version of watch party features—but Amazon Prime Video Watch Party allows you to connect with up to 100 of your friends, and you have access to all the movies and TV shows available through Amazon Prime. Unfortunately, you cannot stream rental or new release titles or premium channels, but there's plenty to choose from in Prime. To start an Amazon Prime Video Watch Party, find the video you want to watch with the Watch Party icon. Select the icon, invite friends, and start watching and chatting with your friends. Watch Party is available in most web browsers and Fire TVs. The Prime Video app for mobile devices supports Watch Party chat, so you can interact with other viewers on your phone while watching on another device. Hulu is one of the top streaming services available, and Hulu subscribers who pay for the Hulu (No Ads) plan or the Hulu (No Ads) + Live TV plan have access to this (apparently beta) feature of the streaming service. Users can host a Hulu Watch Party that allows them to choose from movies with the Watch Party icon. Up to 8 people can join a Hulu Watch Party, including multiple users on the same account, and playback is synced for all 8 people. There's also an option to chat as a group while the watch party is in progress. To host a Watch Party on Hulu, find a title with the Watch Party icon and select it, choose Start Watching, then invite your friends and you're all set. Facebook Watch isn't your typical Watch Party software or application. Instead, it's a feature on Facebook that lets you watch movies from Facebook that users have uploaded and from other sources. You can watch with friends, too, using the Watch Party feature of Facebook Watch. The service includes user-generated videos, it can be used on mobile devices, and it's Facebook-simple to use. However, users are limited in the content they can share with others, and they cannot watch content from outside services. Still, if there are Facebook videos you and your friends enjoy, this is a decent solution. To start a Facebook watch part, click in the What's on your mind text box as if you were writing a post. Then select the three-dots > Watch Party. Next, choose what you want to watch and share it with your friends. Scener is a Chrome browser extension that you can add to create and share watch parties with up to 50 of your friends. The service works with Netflix, HBO, Vimeo, Prime Video, Hulu, Funimation, and Disney+. The crown jewel of the Scener product, however, is the ability to voice, video, and text chat alongside whatever movie or show you choose to watch. Nothing can replace a real theater, but Scener comes in a close second, which is probably why the company bills itself as the Virtual Movie Theater. To start using Scener, you have to install the extension and then select Create Private Theater. Select your options for services and what to watch, then add friends and start chatting. TwoSeven is a free watch party app that automatically syncs everyone's videos and has no participant limits. Any number of people can join, and many different services are supported—from YouTube to Netflix, and more. And if you want, you can connect a webcam to share video of your own live reactions while you all watch. There are some drawbacks, however. While TwoSeven's free tier does support a lot of services, you'll have to become a Patreon subscriber to use it with Hulu or Disney Plus. You'll also need to sign up with Patreon to use Screen Share. And unless you're using Screen Share, everyone in the watch party will need to have their own access to whatever you're watching. So if you want to watch something on Netflix, everybody needs to have their own Netflix subscription. If you're watching something on Disney Plus or Hulu, all participants will need to have a Patreon subscription to TwoSeven. You can share downloaded videos without these restrictions, so if you own any digital copies of a movie or TV show, there is a workaround to watching with friends. Once you create a TwoSeven account you can share the Watch Now URL with as many people as you want to get started. Metastream is a browser extension for Firefox and Chrome that allows you to set up watch parties for virtually any video with a URL. Once you get things set up, start a session and share your friend code to invite anyone. Text chat is supported, and if the linked videos use timestamps those are also included. What's more, you can set up a queue of multiple videos that will automatically play when each video finishes. Meaning you won't have to find something else to watch after the current show ends. Currently, Metastream is only available for Firefox and Chrome, so other web browsers won't work. Kast is a solid option in situations where not everybody has access to the same streaming services. A free account allows anyone to create or join a watch party to stream content from YouTube or Tubi, and supports up to 100 simultaneous watchers. But a premium account can also share anything in Kast's video library, or use Screen Share, with no watch restrictions placed on free accounts. The downside to this is watch parties hosted by free accounts will encounter ads, and what's available to share is somewhat limited. While premium accounts do have more sharing options, streaming services like Netflix and Disney Plus aren't directly supported. Plex Watch Together works for free Plex "Movies & TV" streaming and any videos you have saved on a Plex Media Server. In addition, watching content with friends and family online is free. Watch Together works with a lot of different platforms, too. Everything from Android and iOS to smart TVs and video game consoles are supported. And once you set up a lobby, all you have to do is wait for everyone to show up before you start, so there's no need to worry about syncing the video. Once playing, anyone participating can also control video playback. However, Plex Watch Together doesn't offer any chat options. And if you want to invite someone to join, you have to be friends with them first. So if you aren't already friends in the app, you'll need to jump through a few extra hoops before you can add them to the group. Once you're ready, find the video you want to share and select More, then choose Watch Together to open a lobby. After that, you just have to start inviting people to join.
